When you are not paying for what you are getting; you become the payment

In the realm of free services, it is crucial to recognize that there is no such thing as a free lunch. The adage, "When you are not paying for what you are getting; you become the payment," reminds us of the hidden costs we bear when engaging with seemingly costless offerings with misguiding targeted advertising, etc.

It will help us to get them in rightful manner. True cost of episodes have come drastically down with passionate involvement of learned professionals. Unique Interaction with Tom Cyriac is one of such passionate episodes wherein the master minds and the participants are governed by passion and purpose. You just pay for the overheads involved in the production process.

Engaging with free services often means investing our time and attention. Whether it's spending hours scrolling through social media feeds or navigating through advertisements, we pay with our precious time and cognitive resources.

The opportunity cost of our attention becomes a significant price we pay for accessing these free services. Using free services can create a dependency that makes it challenging to switch or explore alternative options.

Breaking away from these services can be difficult, making us inadvertently pay by sacrificing our freedom of choice. It becomes ingrained in our daily routines, social interactions, and personal lives.
